

I LEFT RIGHT FLOW 865

PLAY DIAGRAM

PLAY STRATEGY

This pass play gives the quarterback receivers on three levels to choose from.

- DEEP LEVEL: The far-side wide receiver runs a deep flag route, stretching the defense vertically and creating a big-play opportunity downfield.
- INTERMEDIATE LEVEL: The tight end works across the formation on an intermediate out route, providing a dependable second-level target.
- SHORT LEVEL: The near-side wide receiver runs a short out route, giving the quarterback a quick completion option and creating a high-low stretch against the defense.

With receivers attacking the short, intermediate, and deep areas of the field simultaneously, the quarterback can quickly identify open throwing lanes and deliver the football to the uncovered receiver.

- 1 SHORT OUT ROUTE (RIGHT WR)
Look first to the quickest-developing route.➡
- 2 INTERMEDIATE OUT ROUTE (TE)
If the flat defender widens, work the intermediate route.➡
- 3 DEEP FLAG ROUTE (LEFT WR)
Take the shot if the corner route comes open over the top.➡

COACHING CUE: SHORT. MIDDLE. DEEP.

KEY COACHING POINTS

MAINTAIN PROPER SPACING

Receivers should stay approximately 10 yards apart vertically to create clear throwing windows and force defenders to defend multiple levels.

READ SHORT TO DEEP

The quarterback should progress from the short out route, to the tight end's intermediate route, and finally to the deep flag route.

PROTECTION FIRST

The offensive line, fullback, and halfback must provide solid pass protection to allow the routes time to develop.

TAKE WHAT THEY GIVE YOU

Do not force the deep throw. If the defense protects the deep route, work underneath and move the chains.

ATTACK DIFFERENT LEVELS

The play is most effective when the defense is forced to defend the short, intermediate, and deep areas simultaneously.
